Children were raised with a strong emphasis on discipline, religious education, and preparation for their future roles in society.

Religion and Ritual Life

The Central Role of Religion

Religion permeated every aspect of Aztec life. They believed that life was a constant struggle between cosmic forces, requiring offerings and rituals to appease gods and ensure harmony. Their pantheon was vast, with deities such as Huitzilopochtli (god of sun and war), Tlaloc (rain god), and Quetzalcoatl (feathered serpent god).

The Aztecs built grand temples, such as the Templo Mayor in Tenochtitlan, where priests conducted daily rituals, sacrifices, and ceremonies. These rituals often involved offerings of food, flowers, and human blood, which they believed sustained the gods and maintained cosmic order.

Human Sacrifice

Perhaps the most infamous aspect of Aztec religion was human sacrifice. It was believed that such offerings were necessary to nourish the gods, particularly Huitzilopochtli, to ensure the sun would rise and the world would continue. Victims were often prisoners of war, and sacrifices could number in the thousands during important festivals. The rituals were elaborate, involving priests, dancers, and musicians, and were considered sacred acts vital for societal stability.

Economy and Food Production

Maize was the staple crop and held religious significance as well, often symbolized in rituals and mythology. The Aztecs also cultivated avocados, cacao (for chocolate), and amaranth, integrating these into their diet and economy.

Trade and Markets

Trade was vital for the Aztec economy. They established extensive marketplaces, with the Tlatelolco Market being the most famous. This bustling hub sold everything from food and textiles to jewelry and pottery. Market days were well-organized, with vendors and buyers from across the empire exchanging goods and ideas, fostering economic stability and social cohesion.

The Aztecs also participated in long-distance trade, exchanging luxury items like obsidian, feathers, and jade with distant regions, which further enriched their material culture.

Art, Architecture, and Culture

Artistic Expression and Craftsmanship

The calpulli (clans) and noble classes often competed in warfare to gain captives for sacrifice and prestige.

Conquest and Tribute

The Aztecs established a vast empire through conquest, demanding tribute from subject states. Conquered peoples paid in goods, labor, and captives, which sustained the empire's economy and religious practices.

Their military campaigns were often justified by religious motives, viewing warfare as a divine obligation to honor the gods and maintain cosmic balance. The spoils of war, including captives, were used in rituals and as a display of power.
